The Unexpected Visitor - Midnight - The Hills

You have one voicemail

"Zelaya where are you" announced the voice message

"Like he cared" I whispered

Right now I have to make the decision if I should enter the dark gloomy tunnel or not. So far my experience in tunnels have always led to misery. Who could I trust?

While I stood in thought the same colour smoke that got me into this mess captured my eye. My legs started moving on their own pulling me closer to the tunnel. Darkness covered me like a warm blanket.

Different types of butterflies fluttered around. The grass on my feet felt like cotton candy. A thick misty fog covered the garden.

"Hear that" Yasmin said with a smile

"I can't hear anything though" I mumbled

"Exactly sweet silence" She giggled.

The cold air seemed to drain the life out of me. Abruptly a sharp pain hit both sides of my ribs forcing me to take big gasps. Something was pulling me closer and closer to a tree. I tried resisting as my life flashed in front of my eyes. My legs started moving ignoring my last brain cells.

Death stood in front of me impatiently watching. Death frowned and time froze. Fireflies stopped in mid air. And I could tell that his anger grew.

My body felt stiff maybe it was because I was covered in ice but oh well.

My body tensed. Death smiled "I think its time I show you something. My hands popped through. Death held my hand and a flutter of warmth spread through my heart. My world was lit in flames. Death's eyes glowed. Immediately the air turned black around me.

294 Death ran through a tree and I felt it was necessary to follow him. A bright light grew in front of my eyes. A faint glow seemed to run towards me. A door popped out of mid-air. A dark ball sped at me. The door started fading in front of my eyes. My heart started racing. I quickly decided to open the door. And to my surprise it was a hill.

A hill which looked like it appeared out of no where. It was just there. A cool breeze started gently swaying me left and right. But I could feel a small burn inside me. A powerful ball of light floated in front of my face. "Follow me" it screamed.

*Pause*

So you might be thinking she's definatly not going to follow it but no I followed it.
