Wed.
One dark night, a young girl named Mollie was having a sleepover with her best friend Emma. "I'm so bored!" Mollie said, looking in the mirror playing with her long brown hair. "I wonder what we should do." Emma mumbled while face planting on Mollie's giant pillow on her bed. Then she had an idea. She sat up, "Why don't we sneak into our school?" Mollie wasn't sure at first but eventually she agreed...

"What are you doing?" Emma asked looking at Mollie who was looking through her wardrobe. "We need a disguise duh!" Mollie replied sassily rolling her pale blue eyes. They picked out the most boring black clothes, sunglasses and a mask to cover their faces. Emma was wearing a plain black top, plain black leggings, sunglasses to cover her bright green eyes and a black winter hat to cover her bright blonde hair. Mollie was wearing the same thing but her hat was grey. They were unsure how to get out of the house without getting caught, they decided the window was somehow the best idea. They climbed out of the dusty window and they had to land on the wet, muddy grass. They didn't have to walk far, Mollie's house was only across the road from Balbardie Primary School. When they got to the school the big black gates were open somehow. "That's weird" Emma said tilting her head, they snuck in slow and walked up the slippery stairs and made it to the doors and for some reason they were also open. The girls were very confused but continued to walk in.

They had been walking through the school for a while, they had passed the head teacher's office and they were now up the stairs. "I can't believe we are really doing this!" Emma whispered "What if someone finds out?" "I'm not sure, but I think they will" Mollie replied. They continued to walk, until Emma spotted a big shadow. It made her stop dead in her tracks. "What is it?" Mollie asked confused, "Nothing" Emma said "I just thought I saw something". "Hey look, that's our classroom!" Mollie whispered as she ran into the dark classroom. Emma shooshed her as she ran after her. The girls heard a noise, as if someone or something was in there with them. "What was that noise?" Mollie whispered, "Is the someone in here?" she added.

Emma was just stood still in fear. When suddenly something jumped out at them; something big and quick on its feet. They both screamed and jumped "don't be scared" It said.

"I'm not going to hurt you, I live here when you aren't here!" It added Mollie and Emma didn't know what to say, they just stood there, stone cold faces. "So why... eh where... who are you... What are you?!" Emma stuttered quietly. "I'm well I haven't got a name but I am an ogre!" the ogre said. They were confused, curious and shocked "An ogre?" Mollie exclaimed "OK!" she added. Emma pulled Mollie's arm into the hallway "Maybe we should go" Emma whispered, "Yeah I think you're right," Mollie whispered back. They ran through the school, past the garden, the gazebo and out the big black gates! They ran home and climbed in the window, put on their matching PJ's, went to bed and never, got, caught!
